• Foot Reflexology

For thousands of years, the Chinese have practiced acupressure finger-point pressure that stimulates reflex zones in the feet, which are systematically linked to all parts of the body. This almost magical touch unclogs energy flow promoting oxygenation to tissues and the removal of toxins. This helps to induce relaxation and boosts health as well.

• Thai Massage

The Thai massage is a process of transferring compassion, A Buddhist tenet, from the spa therapist to the guest. This massage is a meditation in motion in which the practitioner uses their palms, thumbs, elbows and feet to work the lines of energy known as Sen lines, which correspond roughly to the meridians in Acupuncture. This is a Dry massage and does not involve the use of any oils.
